Period : 19th century

Condition : Très bon état

Material : Porcelain

Description

Antique scent case or perfume bottle made of polychrome porcelain, depicting a woman's arm with her hand holding a bunch of grapes. The arm is adorned with a cream-colored pleated cuff. The upper section, with a pink background, features a design of hand-painted polychrome flower bouquets, in the style of 18th-century porcelain. The top is fitted with a gilded metal mount, accented with a twisted cord, and features a circular hinged lid. The lid is adorned with a bloodstone plaque. The hollow interior was intended to hold a scented substance. This decorative object follows in the tradition of 19th-century toilettries and objects of virtue, which were particularly popular during the Second Empire. Length: 10 cm. Very good condition
