Description

Modernist Armchair in Black Faux Leather - 1950s-1960s An elegant modernist armchair dating from the 1950s-1960s, featuring geometric lines and a particularly well-balanced silhouette. It is distinguished by its tall, slightly reclining backrest, generously proportioned seat and wide, architecturally shaped armrests. The backrest and seat feature vertical channel stitching, lending rhythm and character to the overall design. Fully upholstered in black faux leather, the armchair rests on four slender, tapered and slightly splayed black-painted metal legs, providing an elegant contrast with the generous upholstered volumes. The internal wooden frame features traditional interwoven webbing, characteristic of upholstery techniques of the period. In very good overall condition, with remarkably well-preserved
