Description

Pair of silver-plated bronze wall sconces - Louis XV style, 19th-century. A superb pair of silver-plated bronze wall sconces, richly chased in the 18th-century style. Their elegant asymmetrical composition, enlivened by volutes, scrolls, and acanthus foliage, reflects a decorative repertoire inspired by Rocaille art and the Louis XV style. The central shaft, with its sinuous and dynamic lines, is adorned with finely crafted foliage motifs, while the delicately coiled arms terminate in floral-shaped sconces. The particularly expressive chiseling highlights the relief of the ornaments and lends the piece great decorative richness. The silvery patina, with its subtle nuances and luminous highlights, beautifully accentuates the reliefs and details of these bronze pieces. The slender silhouette and the movement of the foliage patterns give this pair a remarkable decorative presence. These wall sconces will naturally find their place in a refined interior, a private mansion, or a home of character, complementing antique woodwork, period furniture, or a prestigious classical decor. A decorative pair with a striking presence, combining Rococo elegance, high-quality chiseling, and the luster of silver-plated bronze.
