Description

Louis XVI-Period Lacquered Wooden Bench, circa 1780A charming Louis XVI-era lacquered wooden bench, resting on tapered legs with fluted, scalloped grooves. This lovely lacquered, molded, and carved wooden bench features a delicate gray patina. Its connecting blocks are decorated with rosettes, and it has a straight, molded band. Its rectangular seat, generously padded and curved, is upholstered in a superb red fabric with gold stripes and finished with trimmings. Comfortable seating. Sturdy construction. Beautiful patina. Exquisitely crafted furniture with understated and refined lines. This bench combines practicality with style, offering comfortable additional seating. Ideal for an entryway, at the foot of a bed, or next to a sofa--but it also makes for a very attractive
