Description

Country: Holland Artist: Adriaen van der Kabel
1635-1705 Subject: Capriccio The painter takes us to an imaginary Mediterranean port, just as the golden evening light stretches the shadows. On the left, a large English ship has just dropped anchor. Smoke from the salute cannon still drifts around the masts as a small boat heads toward shore. On the beach, there is a lively bustle: merchants in hats from Europe are negotiating the unloading of chests and bales of silk with Orientals in turbans. Amid ancient ruins and under the gaze of a Moorish bust carved in stone, cultures intersect in trade. More than just a scene of commerce, the painting captures the era's passion for travel and the dream of a distant Orient, bathed in the gentle lapping of the waves
