1922, the Monument of Cooperation is a remarkable example of Sarteel's artistic vision and sculptural craftsmanship.

The original monument was an impressive 3.20-metre-tall plaster sculpture, conceived on a monumental scale.

In June 1924, the work was presented at the International Cooperative Exhibition (E.I.C.O.S.), held at the Feestpaleis in Ghent's Citadel Park. This significant cultural event celebrated the ideals of the cooperative movement and commemorated the 50th anniversary of Edward Anseele.

Following its presentation, smaller versions of the monument were produced in both plaster and bronze. These reduced-scale editions found their way into collections around the world.

Today, the Monument of Cooperation remains a compelling testament to Leon Sarteel's sculptural legacy and an evocative reflection of the social and artistic ideals of early 20th-century Belgium.
