Description

A significant Louis XIII-style sideboard, crafted by a cabinetmaker during the 20th century. Measuring 261 cm in length, this piece features a four-door front adorned with panels carved with radiating geometric motifs, reminiscent of diamond points arranged in a star pattern. The upper section features four drawers, also decorated with diamond-shaped motifs and fitted with drop-down metal ring handles. The doors are framed by deep moldings, while the side panels feature a geometric relief design. The piece rests on ball-shaped legs and features a top that extends well beyond the body, with molded edges. This handcrafted piece stands out for the quality of its craftsmanship, the richness of its decoration, and its generous proportions. It is part of a set of similarly crafted furniture, which also
