Description

A majestic, large Louis XVI-era portico clock. White marble architecture decorated with high-quality, mercury-gilded bronze ornamentation. Each column is adorned with a large caryatid. The entablature is adorned at the top, atop a black marble column, with an eagle perched on a rock, and at the ends, patinated bronze cherubs, each holding a garland of flowers. A very large, domed white enamel dial with finely crafted bronze hands, protected by a domed glass cover. The space between the columns is filled by a sun-shaped pendulum, whose stem is concealed by an openwork frieze of foliage resembling drapery. The base is made of white Carrara marble and features a bas-relief depicting cherubs and an antique-style mask. Original, unmodified movement; suspended by a
