Description

This set of three nesting tables presents quadrangular structures in patinated brass, with uprights incised with double fillets that underline their verticality. Each clear glass top is set into a moulded frame. The three decreasing sizes nest perfectly one beneath the other, freeing up space when not in use. This rigorous, graphic construction, in burnished brass with a bronzed patina, is characteristic of French design of the 1970s, by Guy Lefèvre for Maison Jansen, who declined the occasional table in brass in strictly architectural lines. Condition report: Good general condition. Brass with an even bronze patina. A practical and elegant trio, to be deployed as needed around a sofa.
