Description

An elegant and rare small table made of solid walnut, dating from the early 17th century. This beautifully proportioned table features a large drawer along the front, accentuated by superb, deeply molded crossbars. It rests on an original base consisting of four beaded columns--a superb architectural reference to the 16th century--joined by an "H"-shaped brace. A remarkable technical feature: its tabletop, made from a single, solid walnut plank with superb grain, is attached to the frame in its original manner using mortise-and-tenon joints in the crossbars (and not pegged from above as is usually the case). A piece of furniture of great authenticity, sound, and in excellent condition. Note a small, old repair along the length of the tabletop on the back side, perfectly integrated and bearing witness to its
