Description

German porcelain figurine depicts a nude female dancer balanced on one foot in a dynamic, expressive pose. Manufactured by Dressel & Kister circa 1910-1912, the sculpture features a glazed porcelain body with finely detailed features. The subject is adorned with painted molded gold jewelry, including an intricate collar necklace set with a central blue cabochon accent, matching wide cuffs on both wrists, and gold-toned spherical ornaments on her light-colored slippers. Her grey hair is styled in a bob contour typical of the early twentieth century. She stands with her right leg lifted forward and arms bent for balance. The figurine is mounted onto a square, tiered wooden pedestal base finished in a dark lacquer. A small, 2-millimeter reddish-brown firing mark is present on the inside
