Description

Title: Tuscan "paesina" stone in a 19th-century gilded frame
Period: First half of the 20th century;
19th-century frame.
Description: Decoration made from a slab of Tuscan "paesina" stone, characterized by striking natural veining and inclusions that evoke a landscape featuring the outlines of buildings, towers, and ruins. The stone, measuring 24 × 6 cm, was presumably carved and mounted in the first half of the 20th century; it is set within a composition with a blue background, affixed to a hardboard panel. The piece is framed by a 19th-century wooden frame gilded with pure gold, measuring 44 × 26 cm, featuring simple and elegant molding with a patina of age. An interesting decorative object that highlights the unique figurative qualities of "pietra paesina," a stone prized since the Renaissance for its ability
