Description

This delicate antique watercolor depicts a bucolic waterside landscape.At the center of the composition, a tall, slender poplar stands among other trees on a small, lush bank; their reflections are visible in the water.The watercolor technique reveals lovely transparencies and beautiful textural effects, particularly in the rendering of the foliage and reflections. The natural palette is dominated by greens, browns, and sandy tones.The vertical composition, emphasized by the height of the poplar, is accentuated by the frame.Its charm lies as much in the simplicity of the subject as in the delicacy of its execution.Technique: Watercolor on paperPeriod: First half of the 20th century Subject: landscapeStyle:figurativeCondition: Very good condition. Recently framed.Dimensions: 32.5 ×
