Description

An elegant Art Deco-style tableware set consisting of three pieces made of fine earthenware by the renowned Italian manufacturer Richard Ginori, including a covered soup tureen, a large salad bowl, and a sugar bowl or creamer with a lid and saucer.The set features a sleek cream-and-white design adorned with a geometric motif depicting a stylized burgundy-colored arrow, and is cataloged under the name "freccia."The marks on the reverse allow this set to be dated to 1932-1933, a pivotal period marking the end of the artistic direction of the great modernist designer and architect Gio Ponti.In 1923, the Richard Ginori factory--founded in Milan in 1735--entrusted its artistic direction to the young architect Gio Ponti. For 10 years, he revolutionized Italian ceramics
