Description

A handsome French oak dining table in the traditional refectory style, dating from the 20th century. Crafted from solid oak, the table combines robust construction with elegant architectural details, making it equally suited to classic country interiors and more contemporary settings. The rectangular top features a moulded edge with gently chamfered corners, lending refinement to its substantial proportions. Supported by two turned pedestal bases, the table displays a balanced silhouette inspired by historic monastery and refectory tables. Each pedestal terminates in shaped cross feet that provide both stability and visual weight, emphasizing the table's enduring craftsmanship. The rich oak grain and warm patina enhance the table's timeless character, while the clean lines of the double
