Description

This exceptional 14-karat gold bangle, dating from the 1900s, is a fine example of the refined craftsmanship of turn-of-the-century jewelers. Its center is adorned with two dazzling diamonds cut in the Dutch rose style, which delicately play with the light and highlight the antique charm of this piece. The body of the bracelet is decorated with openwork motifs of leaves and geometric shapes, finely hand-engraved, with every detail reflecting meticulous craftsmanship and great artistic mastery. Elegant yet unique, this piece of jewelry is much more than a precious antique: it embodies the elegance and timeless beauty of its era and will take pride of place in any jewelry collection. Material: 14-karat gold Stones: 2 Dutch rose-cut diamonds, approx. 0.10 ct Period, style: 1900s Dimensions: 57 × 50 mm Weight: 9.10 g All
