Description

A superb pair of large Provençal terracotta jars, partially glazed, in the tradition of the famous Biot pottery, likely dating from the 19th century. With their generous and harmonious shape, these jars feature a beautiful honey-yellow glaze on the neck and shoulders, elegantly contrasting with the natural terracotta of their bodies. Their shoulders are adorned with embossed motifs, characteristic of the craftsmanship of Provençal potters. They have retained a beautiful patina, with the nuances and traces of time that give these old utilitarian pottery pieces their charm; today, they are particularly sought after for their decorative quality. Their remarkable proportions and authentic silhouette make them magnificent decorative pieces for a Provençal country house,
