Description

A mihrab at the heart of the kilim
The eye is first drawn to the large red field. Its slender silhouette, crowned with a point, forms a stylized mihrab and provides the composition with its axis--almost its architecture. Within it, a series of small geometric motifs enlivens the surface without disrupting its order. The extreme fineness of the weave lends them remarkable precision: each shape stands out with sharp, almost chiseled contours. This arrangement evokes the mihrapli kilims of the Sivas region. Against a background of ecru wool, subtly greige, the geometric shapes of the border stand out, repeated in a mirror pattern. Their curved arms evoke the elibelinde, a female figure traditionally associated with motherhood, fertility, and family happiness. The dark bands lend depth to the red field, while the
