Description

This vase plays on the trompe-l'oeil of a knotted cloth sack: the ceramic renders the folds, the gathers and the drawstring with striking naturalism. The polychrome glaze depicts a fabric with stylised floral decoration on bright yellow and orange grounds, and the gathered neck naturally forms the opening of the vase. The brilliance of the glaze heightens the illusion of waxed textile. This kind of witty trompe-l'oeil ceramic belongs to the pop current of the 1970s, when European workshops -- Italian in particular -- reinterpreted everyday objects with great virtuosity, in the spirit of the ceramic "crumpled sacks" of the period. Condition report: Good overall condition. Glossy glaze and fresh polychromy. A witty object, whether used as a vase or simply displayed as a sculpture on a shelf
