

Vanitas, Tamarind Wood And Bone

180 EUR

Period : 20th century

Condition : Très bon état

Description

A striking anatomical sculpture depicting a human skull, entirely hand-carved from tamarind wood, featuring beautiful natural grain and remarkable attention to detail. The skull structure is carved from a single block of wood, while the lower jaw is crafted separately and secured with small tamarind pins that allow it to open and close. The teeth, individually carved from bovine bone, accurately reproduce the human dentition, contributing to the realism of the piece. Particularly striking is the contrast between the warm tones and dark grain of the wood and the light color of the bone elements. The craftsmanship highlights the anatomical forms of the skull, transforming a subject traditionally associated with the study of anatomy and reflections on mortality into a decorative object.
