Description

This monumental porcelain column-pedestal, crafted by the prestigious Swedish manufacturer Rörstrand, is a remarkable example of the decorative arts of the historicist period, enriched by a strong neoclassical influence. Designed as a refined architectural support, it was intended to showcase monumental vases, sculptures, planters, or other decorative objects in prestigious interiors of the late 19th and early 20th centuries. The pedestal takes the form of a classical fluted column resting on a circular base and topped by a molded shelf. The capital is adorned with spectacular ram's heads carved in high relief, connected by garlands, stylized hooves, and finely modeled plant motifs. The ram's head motif has its origins in the decorative vocabulary of ancient architecture and is an emblematic element of Classicism and Neoclassicism, symbolizing strength, nobility, and abundance. The brilliant white enamel beautifully highlights the quality of the sculptural modeling as well as the finesse of the relief work. With its balanced proportions and distinct architectural character, this column possesses genuine artistic value in its own right and can be considered a decorative work in its own right. Markings: Rörstrand manufacturer's mark affixed beneath the base, attesting to production by one of Sweden's oldest and most prestigious porcelain manufacturers. Dimensions: Height: 89 cm. Diameter (top shelf and base): 30 cm. ID-ANTQ-2614
