from the overall simplicity of the piece. The piece retains its original manufacturer's plaque from Warden & Hotchkiss, a documented manufacturing firm in Birmingham--one of England's leading metallurgical centers--which dates it to late 19th-century English production. With its proportions and presence, it complements a highly decorative bed and also functions as a standalone piece in a classic, eclectic, or historically inspired interior, a home with character, or a boutique hotel. It can serve as a decorative headboard, simply placed against the wall. It pairs well with the 150 × 105 cm Warden & Hotchkiss headboard, which is also available.
