

Blown-glass Shepherd's Bottle - 18th/19th-century Folk Art.

120 EUR

Period : 19th century

Condition : Bon état

Material : Glass

Description

An antique bottle commonly known as a "shepherd's bottle" or "peddler's flask," made of mouth-blown glass. A beautiful collector's item or decorative piece, reflecting the folk art of the 18th and 19th centuries. Features: Material: Period bubble-blown glass, with superb natural iridescence. Shape: Typical spherical body with a double-funnel neck (hourglass shape). Condition: Very good overall condition for its age. No major cracks (see photos). The original blow mark is present under the base, attesting to its handcrafted production using a glassblowing rod. Dimensions: Easy to hold (see photo with hand for scale). Perfect for collectors of display pieces, antique glassware, apothecary bottles, or for decorating a cabinet of curiosities. - This item is available for immediate purchase, payable via
