Description

The piece features a form highly characteristic of the Jugendstil production of this period: a globular body, a long, slightly curved neck, an asymmetrical leaf-shaped opening, long applied stems coiling around the neck, and botanical ornamentation in high relief. The design combines large ivory-colored leaves or water lilies, a matte green background, an "old rose" (dusty pink) neck, and gilded accents. The overall composition is remarkably organic and highly representative of the Art Nouveau aesthetic. The underside bears a number and traces of old red markings, now partially worn away.
