Description

A refined and exceptionally unique French Louis XV period piece from the mid-18th century, embodying the elegance and masterful cabinetmaking typical of French aristocratic craftsmanship of the era.The piece features a flowing and harmonious structure in fine bois de violette, embellished with refined floral and geometric inlays in various types of wood, creating a sophisticated interplay of colors and decorative elements with a striking visual impact. The front is characterized by an upper drawer and doors below with contoured paneling and fillet work, in keeping with the rocaille style typical of the Louis XV period.Of particular note are the finely chiseled, mercury-gilded bronze fittings found on the handles, air vents, feet, and ornamental elements, a testament to the piece's
