Description

Description: Elegant French Restoration period gondola armchair in solid walnut, dating from circa 1820, featuring beautifully sculpted details and a rich, warm patina developed over two centuries. This distinctive armchair is characterized by its gracefully curved, enveloping backrest, which extends into elegantly shaped armrests terminating in carved scrolls. The sculptural design continues through the front legs, decorated with finely executed volutes and flowing curves, while the gently splayed rear legs provide a harmonious balance to the overall silhouette. The walnut frame displays attractive natural grain patterns, warm honey and amber tones, and a beautifully aged surface that enhances the chair's authentic nineteenth-century character. The generously proportioned, upholstered seat is covered in striking deep teal-blue leather, secured with decorative brass upholstery studs. The contrast between the vibrant leather and the warm walnut creates a particularly sophisticated appearance. Combining the elegance of French Restoration furniture with the comfort of a generously shaped seat, this armchair would make a beautiful accent piece in a living room, bedroom, library, or refined contemporary interior. The wooden frame presents a charming antique patina with age-related marks and natural variations consistent with its history.
