Description

An elegant pair of cherubs carved from Carrara marble, characterized by refined craftsmanship and delicate expressiveness. The attributes accompanying the figures suggest a possible allegorical interpretation linked to the cycle of the seasons. The putto holding a bunch of grapes may represent Autumn, traditionally associated with the grape harvest and the abundance of the harvest. The other figure, with a cloth draped over its head and holding a bundle of plant elements, may instead evoke Summer. These sculptures possess timeless charm and blend harmoniously into both classic, sophisticated settings and modern, contemporary contexts. Period: 19th century Material: Carrara marble Dimensions: 70 × 30 cm; 74 × 30 cm Code: 399 Additional information: The work is available
