Description

An elegant and imposing Venetian-made column clock, dating from the late 18th century, during the Louis XVI period. The slender and architecturally articulated structure is crafted from walnut, embellished with refined inlays of wood in various shades and rich carved elements, which lend the piece remarkable decorative value. The case stands out for the understated elegance of its proportions and the sophistication of its ornamentation, featuring neoclassical decorative motifs that characterize the upper section, enriched by a shaped cornice and crowning ornamental elements. The central body, divided by panels and molded frames, features exquisite craftsmanship on the wooden surfaces, enhanced by the color contrast of the woods used. The painted dial, framed by refined
