Description

An elegant Baroque-style floral still life depicting a rich arrangement of roses, tulips, hollyhocks, poppies, passion flowers, and other varieties of flowers, arranged in a basket resting on a stone surface. The composition stands out for its decorative abundance, botanical variety, and meticulous rendering of details--elements typical of the great Flemish tradition of flower painting from the 17th to the 18th centuries. The work is inspired by the models of Pieter Casteels III (1684-1749), a Flemish painter particularly known for his floral still lifes and compositions featuring birds. Active between Antwerp and London, Casteels developed a rich, elegant, and highly decorative style that was much appreciated throughout the 18th century. The canvas thus features a composition of great visual impact,
