Description

Park Sculpture - Young Faun Playing the Flute - Bronze and Iron Fountain
Period: 1970sA beautiful park sculpture depicting a young faun musician playing the flute, resting on an imposing seashell. The figure, with a full head of hair delicately adorned with flowers, strikes a graceful and dynamic pose, with one leg slightly raised. Crafted from a bronze and iron alloy, this sculpture features a very attractive antique patina with shades of verdigris and brown. It retains some traces of oxidation and rust which, far from detracting from its charm, actually lend it its unique character and authenticity. Designed to be used as a fountain, it features a small internal brass tube at the base that allows it to be connected to a water supply. Water can thus flow from the tip of the flute held by the figure. This
