Description

Engraved glass with hunting scene--Bohemia or Saxony, Regency period, circa 1700-1730. Elegant blown glass with engraved decoration, typical of Central European productions of the early 18th century. The slightly flared glass blank is finely decorated on the wheel with a hunting scene featuring two hunters in period attire, armed with rifles and spears, framing a leaping stag in a landscape. In the background is a large drive hunt, a motif characteristic of glassware intended for the nobility or hunting guilds. An engraved band bears a fragmentary Latin inscription (Vigi-Landum), referring to the theme of vigilance, a leitmotif frequently associated with the stag in 18th-century hunting iconography. The stem features a richly worked molded knot, supporting a slightly flared circular
