Description

A striking Dutch Amsterdamse School armchair dating from the 1920s, crafted in solid oak and distinguished by its strong architectural lines and refined geometric detailing. The slatted backrest features contrasting black-painted vertical accents, a characteristic design element associated with the expressive craftsmanship of the Amsterdam School movement.The chair is further enhanced by black-tipped armrests and feet, creating a subtle yet elegant contrast with the warm oak frame. The generously proportioned seat is upholstered in olive green velvet and finished with decorative brass nailhead trim, adding both comfort and visual richness.Combining robust construction with sophisticated design, this armchair embodies the functional artistry and decorative restraint that made Dutch furniture of the period so distinctive. It would make an excellent statement piece in both period and contemporary interiors.Condition: Good vintage condition with normal signs of age and use. The upholstery remains well presented, and the oak frame displays an attractive patina consistent with its age. The photographs form an integral part of the condition description.
