Description

A distinctive Belgian Art Deco lounge chair dating from the 1920s, combining artisanal craftsmanship with the warm materials and decorative detailing characteristic of the period. The chair's low, inviting proportions and rich textural contrasts create a striking presence while maintaining a sense of comfort and practicality.Crafted in solid oak, the frame features elegantly shaped armrests supported by turned uprights, echoed by the turned front legs and decorative detailing throughout. The standout feature is the backrest, executed in basket-woven leather straps and crowned by an embossed leather crest panel decorated with stylized foliate motifs. Upholstery nails frame the leatherwork, adding a handcrafted quality and subtle decorative rhythm.The generous seat and front apron are upholstered in ochre velvet, providing a warm contrast to the oak and leather. The rich golden tone enhances the chair's architectural silhouette and reflects the luxurious yet restrained aesthetic of early Art Deco design.Condition: Good vintage condition with wear consistent with age and use. The woven leather back shows visible wear and patina, while the ochre velvet upholstery exhibits signs of age and use. These characteristics contribute to the authenticity and charm of the piece. The photographs form an integral part of the condition description.
