Description

Description :Elegant French porcelain vase attributed to Maison Chabanier, Limoges, dating from the late 19th century.This striking decorative vase features a beautifully marbled surface in rich shades of crimson, raspberry pink, deep burgundy and violet, enhanced by delicate gilded accents. The swirling patterns create a remarkable visual effect, reminiscent of natural veined stone, with subtle variations in colour and texture throughout the porcelain.The vase has a graceful classical urn shape, featuring a flared circular rim, a slender neck, a generously rounded body tapering towards the base, and a finely proportioned pedestal foot. Its elegant silhouette is characteristic of the refined decorative taste of the late 19th century.The marbled decoration is particularly attractive, combining vibrant colours with contrasting pale veins and scattered golden highlights. The gilding emphasises the contours and enhances the richness of the overall composition. With its harmonious proportions and richly detailed decoration, this vase beautifully reflects the late 19th-century taste for ornamental objects featuring sophisticated surface effects. The contrast between the intense colours, delicate veining and gilded highlights gives the piece a particularly striking presence. Its decorative patterns vary from every angle, revealing the subtle complexity of the marbled porcelain and the refinement of its finish. A highly decorative example of French porcelain, ideal for display on a console, mantelpiece or pedestal, either as a standalone statement piece or as part of a collection of antique ceramics.
