Description

Description :An attractive antique French copper jardiniere dating from the late 19th century, combining traditional craftsmanship with the rustic elegance of French country interiors.This beautifully proportioned rectangular jardiniere features an elongated body with softly rounded ends, crafted from copper with a warm reddish-gold patina. Its simple yet elegant silhouette is complemented by a substantial rolled rim and a beautifully shaped wrought iron swing handle, which adds both character and decorative interest.The dark, naturally aged iron contrasts wonderfully with the polished highlights and subtle variations in the copper surface. The handle is attached at either end through sturdy metal fittings, featuring gracefully curved details that reflect the craftsmanship of the period.The construction reveals traditional metalworking techniques, including visible soldered seams and hand-finished details, giving the piece an authentic antique appearance.Originally intended as a decorative container, this jardiniere would have been suitable for displaying flowers, greenery, or seasonal arrangements. Its generous elongated proportions make it particularly attractive as a table centrepiece, on a kitchen island, or displayed upon an antique sideboard.The copper retains a beautiful natural patina, with minor dents, surface scratches, slight irregularities, and traces of age and use, all contributing to its charm and authenticity.A wonderful decorative accessory for a French country kitchen, farmhouse interior, or traditional home, equally appealing as a standalone object or filled with a floral arrangement.Dimensions:H. 15 cm / 5.91 inW. 48.5 cm / 19.09 inD. 17.5 cm / 6.89 in
