Description

Oil on canvas. The scene takes place at a military camp: outside a tent on the left, an army commander--probably Greek--is receiving offerings from a group of poor, ragged men who are prostrating themselves before their new master; the first is offering loaves of bread, another is pulling something out of a sack, and the third is showing the sores on his body to implore mercy; behind them, other figures of supplicants are approaching, forming a scattered line along the path that fades into the distance on the right.In the background on the left, life bustles in the military camp.The painting has been restored and re-framed.ARARPI0234755
