Description

Animal Combat Print depicting a wild boar attacked by a pack of hunting dogs. The particularly dynamic composition contrasts the imposing mass of the wild boar with the tangled mass of the dogs' bodies. The drawing, with its great anatomical precision, combines fine hatching with a network of energetic, crisscrossing lines--characteristic of Pierre-Yves Trémois's graphic work. The scene reflects the artist's interest in the animal world, anatomy, and the depiction of movement. Signed on the plate in the upper right corner. Provenance mark VII/30 in pencil in the lower right corner. Presented under glass in a gilded frame with a mat. A few foxing spots visible on the paper. Dimensions of the print: 42 × 65 cm Technique: print on paper Period: 20th century
