Description

Pair of small mirrors in carved wood gilded with pure gold - Early 19th century An elegant pair of small mirrors from the early 19th century, crafted from finely carved wood and gilded with pure gold, featuring refined neoclassical decoration with references to 18th-century ornamental traditions. The frames feature a richly carved cornice with opposing volutes, foliage motifs, and a central element in the shape of a stylized shell. The sides are embellished with elegant plant-inspired carvings, while the lower section ends with two graceful curved feet. Originally, the two frames were part of a triptych of gilded wood panels intended for the liturgical decoration of an altar. Having lost their central element, they were later adapted into mirrors by inserting non-original mirrored surfaces. The antique
