Description

Large oval porcelain serving dish with polychrome floral decoration, in the style of the Imperial Porcelain Manufactory in Vienna, Austria, second half of the 18th century. The center of the platter is adorned with a central bouquet of roses and tulips in shades of purple, accompanied by small flowers and foliage. Four bouquets arranged along the rim complete the design, featuring a combination of pink, yellow, red, and blue flowers. The dish features a scalloped border with a bas-relief wickerwork design, alternating with radiating gadroons, characteristic of 18th-century tableware. Blue mark hidden beneath the glaze on the reverse, evoking the shield of the Imperial Viennese Manufactory (Bindenschild). Original numbering painted in red. Model circa 1760-1780. 40 × 32
