Description

These earrings, crafted from 18-karat white gold, blue topaz (semi-precious stones), and diamonds, feature an intricately detailed design that blends geometric lines with swirling curves. Their charm lies in this lavish composition. Each earring features an openwork rectangular upper section, followed by two scrolls that wind around either side of the central stone. Below, several rounded ribbons overlap like a fan. The polished white gold borders highlight each level and add depth to the overall design. I see in them an Art Deco inspiration, evident in the symmetry, the tiered volumes, and the square stone set in a diamond shape, softened by almost organic scrolls. What particularly appeals to me is the contrast between the highly structured center and the softness of the suspended pear-shaped stone. These earrings
