Description

Important cabinet in rosewood with engraved bone inlaysNorthern Italy, 17th centuryAn important cabinet veneered in rosewood, richly decorated with engraved bone inlays featuring geometric and ornamental motifs--a testament to the refinement and mastery of 17th-century cabinetmakers from Northern Italy.The upper section is centered around an elegant architectural portico, inspired by classical architecture, framed by columns and topped with a pediment. The central door opens to reveal a "theater" (an interior display space) containing four drawers, while six side drawers--arranged symmetrically--retain their original locks, though the keyholes have been sealed. A large, full-width drawer completes the lower section of the cabinet. The cresting features a balustraded
