Description

Antique animal drawing in graphite - Lion in profile, 19th centuryAn elegant animal study depicting a lion in profile, executed in graphite on paper in the 19th century.The feline is depicted in a peaceful pose, with a powerful, elongated body, its head slightly tilted, and its mane suggested by subtle play of light and shadow. The drawing demonstrates a careful study of anatomy, with nuanced rendering of the animal's musculature, form, and posture.The finesse of the line, the soft shading, and the delicate contrasts of the graphite lend this study an almost sculptural presence. The work as a whole retains the spontaneity of a sketch from life, while revealing a genuine sensitivity in the rendering of the body and texture.A work of authentic charm, rooted in the tradition of 19th-century animal drawing--an era
