Description

Dutch drop-front chest of drawers in oak, dating from the mid-19th century, featuring a scalloped front with three drawers. The side posts, projecting at a 45-degree angle, culminate in elegant animal-foot legs, giving the piece a sturdy and distinctive appearance. The chest features a pair of side pull-outs that support the drop-down top, which conceals a refined interior compartment. Inside, ladder-style side drawers, open compartments, and a central door provide functional and well-organized storage space. A secret compartment beneath the top adds a touch of mystery and practicality. The chiseled and gilded bronze vents and handles further enhance the design, while the restoration work carried out ensures the preservation of the piece's structural and aesthetic integrity.
