Description

A rare pair of chairs made of solid oak, molded and carved.These chairs exemplify a design philosophy in which the structural framework becomes an integral part of the decorative language. The curved lines of the uprights, the sweeping legs, and the skillfully designed crossbars create a silhouette that is both architectural and organic--a hallmark of the Art Nouveau aesthetic.The openwork backs, with their particularly expressive composition, combine a frame with enveloping curves and a central carved and molded motif. The interplay of solid and void, the fluidity of the lines, and the continuity of form between the various elements reveal a quest for balance between structural solidity and ornamental elegance.The seats, upholstered in fawn-colored leather with a warm,
