Description

This painting is inspired--albeit with notable differences--by the series on the Creation of the World by Jan Sons ('s-Hertogenbosch, 1547 - Parma, 1608). The depiction of the vegetation and landscape in the background, typically Flemish in style, is adapted here to a mid-17th-century Spanish style, likely belonging to the Madrid school, or perhaps even the Seville school. The presence of animals--also of Flemish influence--is a remarkable detail, executed with great skill; this element, combined with the uniqueness of the subject depicted, gives the work a truly distinctive and intriguing character. The painting is in good condition, although it has been slightly trimmed on the sides and at the top.
