Description

This pastel painting depicts a young child (probably a boy between the ages of 2 and 4, dressed in 19th-century children's fashion). The child has light blond hair that falls to the shoulders, slightly wavy, with a center-parted fringe. He has large, dark brown eyes, slightly flushed cheeks, a small nose, and full, pink lips. His gaze is gentle, turned slightly toward the viewer. The child is dressed in a puffy dress/tunic, fawn-pink (or peach) in color, with loose sleeves. Pastel, glass-framed. France, circa 1830. Inscription text: "Uncle Armand Marie Joseph Lévier""St. Cyprien, appointed second lieutenant by Emperor Napoleon III on October 1, 1854"" Killed at Sevastopol on September 8, 1855, struck in the head by a Russian bullet around 3:00 p.m." Dimensions including frame:
