Description

Oil on canvas, circa 1920-1930, depicting a landscape with haystacks. A work with a synthetic style, signed "Deziré" in the lower right corner. Henri Désiré: Henry Désiré initially trained as a mold maker and foundryman before being noticed and encouraged by William Bouguereau to enroll at the Académie Julian and then the École des Beaux-Arts in Paris in 1899. He set up his studio in Montparnasse and made his debut at the Salon de la Société des Artistes Français in 1904, then at the Salon d'Automne beginning in 1908, before exhibiting at the Durand-Ruel Gallery. Today, some of his paintings can be found in the collections of the Musée d'Art Moderne de Paris and the Centre Georges Pompidou. Condition Report: The mounted canvas is not securely attached, causing swelling;
