Description

Christofle "Two Carp" vase, crystal, height 33 cm. A superb and substantial zoomorphic vase--known as the "Two Fish" or "Facing Carp" model--originally designed by Émile Reiber in 1874 for the firm of Christofle. The artist drew inspiration from a Japanese bronze piece from the Edo period, held in the collection of the Cernuschi Museum. This theme aligns perfectly with the Japonisme movement, which was in vogue during the 19th century. This version, crafted in frosted and satin-finished crystal, was produced by the Cristallerie Royale de Champagne in Bayel. The piece is in exceptional condition: it still bears its original "Christofle" label as well as a "handmade crystal" label. It is signed "Christofle" on the underside of the base. It is in perfect condition. Height: 33 cm; Width:
