Description

Enameled glass wedding goblet with "Liebe" inscription, in its original case 18th century Germanic school, probably Alsace or Switzerland - Late 18th century Charming antique goblet made of clear glass, adorned with a remarkable design painted in polychrome enamel and accented with gilding. The main face features a decorative composition centered on a turquoise-green turquoise, outlined in golden brown and bearing the handwritten inscription "Liebe," meaning "Love" in German. Two stylized motifs, predominantly pink and white, surmount the cartouche, while an elegant floral and plant motif, in shades of blue, yellow, turquoise, and black, unfolds around it. The top edge is accented with a gold border. The goblet is stored in its cylindrical turned-wood case, complete with its hinged lid and metal clasp. The inside of the lid is lined with an antique protective material, now weathered. The top of the case features a relief medallion whose motif, despite its wear, merits a thorough study. With its sentimental inscription, its decoration, and the inclusion of its protective case, this set evokes the tradition of motto glasses and personal gifts in Germanic Europe. It could be considered an engagement or wedding gift. A piece with distinct character, particularly interesting for collectors of antique glassware, European folk art, or objects related to wedding traditions.
