Description

Portrait of a Woman Attributed to Jacques Henner (1829-1905)Oil on wood : 30 × 23 cmFrame: 45 × 38 cmThis oil portrait of a young redheaded woman wearing a red dress is emblematic of the French painter Jean-Jacques Henner (1829-1905). The work perfectly illustrates Henner's artistic signature, recognizable through several key elements: The redheaded model: Henner was fascinated by red hair and translucent skin. He produced numerous variations of female portraits featuring this palette of warm colors. Sfumato and chiaroscuro: The face gently emerges from a dark, minimalist background. The contours are softened and ethereal, a technique inspired by the masters of the Italian Renaissance. The theme of Fabiola: This type of full-face or three-quarter portrait
